

Citizenship, Belonging, and Subversion: The Invention of Tradition in Culinary Fictions of Asian-North America

Dr. Julie B. Mehta

When: Tuesday, 28 October, 2014, 3 p.m.

Where: AJC Bose Auditorium, Presidency University

Julie B. Mehta is the author of Dance of Life: The Mythology, History, and Politics of Cambodian Culture and co-author of Strongman: The Extraordinary Life of Hun Sen, the Cambodian Prime Minister. She holds a PhD in English Literature and South Asian Studies from the University of Toronto, specialises in Postcolonial/ World Literatures, and taught the first Cultural Studies course on Asian Cultures and Literatures in Canada for eight years, at the University of Toronto's Canadian Studies Program. Her current research and publications focus on foodways, particularly on diasporic Asian-North American Culinary Literature, and she is currently editing a compendium on The Food History of India.